Obama orders campaign to destroy Islamic State

President says U.S., allies will use airstrikes, train Syria rebels

By Mark Landler
NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama said Wednesday night that he was ordering a significantly expanded military campaign against Sunni militants in the Middle East that includes American airstrikes in Syria and the deployment of nearly 500 more military advisers to Iraq. But he sought to dispel fears that the United States was embarking on a repeat of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

In a televised speech from the State Floor of the White House, Obama said the United States was recruiting a global coalition to “degrade and ultimately destroy” the militants, from the Islamic State in Iraq and Syria. He warned that the effort would require years of sustained effort.

“We will hunt down terrorists who threaten our country, wherever they are,” Obama said. “That
